Amanda Peet At The Premiere of The X Files: I Want To Believe

Actress Amanda Peet now understands the great lengths that "X-Files" stars David Duchovny and Gillian Anderson go to in their roles as paranormal investigators - especially in their upcoming film "The X-Files: I Want To Believe."

Peet takes on the role of FBI Agent Dakota Whitney and appears alongside Fox Mulder(Duchovny) during a chilly investigation.

While in the bitter cold, the two discover a frozen bathing suit that smells of chlorine, which calls them into action in search of a nearby swimming pool.

In the scene, Peet dons a big winter hat that looks a lot like the one Frances McDormand wore in "Fargo."

"It was so freezing that I wanted to look really pretty and have, like, a pretty hat. And then I realized how freezing it was," she told Early Show co-anchor Harry Smith.

Like her co-stars Duchovny and Anderson, who have been mum about their possible on-screen romance, Peet is divulging few details about the film.

"What's under that hat you don't know," Peet said. "It's like a 'Twilight Zone' episode," as she motioned antennae on her head with her hands.

"That would be the universal symbol for aliens under Frances McDormand 'Fargo' hats!" Smith said.

Alyssa Milano on 'Romantically Challenged'

Alyssa Milano likes to think of her new sitcom Romantically Challenged (premieres tonight, ABC, 9:30 p.m. ET) as Friends for the Facebook and Twitter generation.

"It's edgy and real and about a group of friends who are functional and awesome when they're together, but outside of their circle, they're socially inept," she says. The show, created by Ricky Blitt (who's written for Family Guy and Politically Incorrect), follows Milano's character — a lawyer and single mother named Rebecca — as she's, say, encouraged to have her first one-night stand, and Kyle Bornheimer's Perry — Rebecca's childhood buddy who's now a successful financial planner and Pittsburgh's most hopeless romantic — as he struggles to please his girlfriend in the bedroom (she likes to be spanked).

Alicia Keys is postponing the release of her much-anticipated collaboration with Beyonce Knowles until the summer, so she can put out a track with Canadian star Drake.

The R&B beauties jetted to the slums of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil in February to film a new music video for Put It In a Love Song, which they recorded for Key's latest album The Element of Freedom last year.

The promo was expected to air in March but Keys has revealed she's put the song on hold while she makes plans to promote Un-Thinkable (I'm Ready), which features vocals from singer/rapper Drake.

Speaking about her Beyonce duet, Keys tells Rap-Up.com, "Expect it right after my Un-Thinkable video. It's kind of nice that I have such a great video (with) such a great artist in the can. They're going to be able to see the Un-Thinkable video first and then see Put It In a Love Song, but it probably won't come until closer to this summer."

Keys has ruled out inviting Drake to make a cameo in the clip when she shoots it later this month but hopes to collaborate with him again in the future: "He won't be in the video. That's too obvious. (But) he's a great guy. I'm really proud of all the things he's been able to achieve, and we're most likely going to do some kind of remix for the song that'll be really good. There'll be more of me and Drake."

Lindsay Lohan And Sister Ali Flaunt Skinny Bikini Bodies

Lindsay Lohan's fluctuating weight – which has dropped dramatically in recent months – has long been the subject of press speculation.

But on holiday in the Caribbean at the moment, it's Lindsay's sister Ali's slim figure that has come under the spotlight.

The pair were spotted flaunting their bikini bodies as they caught some rays on board a private boat on Monday.

And 16-year-old Ali looked particularly skinny in a black two-piece ensemble.

The two sisters boarded the lavish boat after a spot of shoe shopping in some of St Barts' high-end designer stores.

Lindsay is just one of a number of Hollywood celebrities currently enjoying a break at the private resort.
